INDYCAR ANNOUNCES EXPANDED 1995 PPG INDY CAR WORLD SERIES RACE SCHEDULE

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (June 23, 1994) -- Championship Auto Racing Teams, Inc., today announced an expanded schedule of events for the 1995 PPG Indy Car World Series.

The 1995 series, which will open with a new event in Miami, totals 17 events, including the 1995 Indianapolis 500, which is seperately sanctioned.

"The 1995 IndyCar schedule reflects two shifts in our planning," noted president and chief executive officer Andrew Craig. "The first is a return to the Southeastern United States with our season-opener in Miami, which was an important market missing from our series in recent years.

"Secondly, we have accomplished our goal of shifting our racing calendar forward to take advantage of the early spring television audience and conversely reducing the number of events which conflict with the fall football season.

"In order to achieve these goals, our teams have agreed to undertake an arduous schedule which includes four successive events," notes Craig. "It is not our general plan to demand such a heavy concentration of events, but the benefits of expanding our broadcast audience are too appealing to ignore."

The television schedule for the 1995 season will be announced seperately within the next few weeks, but will include a record minimum of 10 races on network television, making IndyCar the dominant televised motor sports franchise in the USA.
